The call is aimed primarily at projects involving video games, augmented reality, virtual reality or interactive comics, as well as any other form of digital content that requires a high level of interaction from the user.

The call seeks to support in particular innovative projects that combine creativity, state-of-the-art technology and commercial potential. Projects selected are characterised by their originality, formal and artistic quality, feasibility, degree of innovation and marketability.

With this call for projects, Pro Helvetia will allocate three categories of support based on the stage of the project. The categories of support are the following: pre-production grant, production grant and post-production grant.

General conditions for participation

The «Call for Projects – Interactive Media» addresses independent, interactive content developed for computers, smartphones, tablets, game consoles and other comparable interfaces. The following criteria must be fulfilled:

- The main project managers are of Swiss nationality or resident in Switzerland.
- The project must be realised according to professional standards.
- Projects set up in a university context are eligible for funding if the project owners hold a clear majority share of the copyrights and user rights and are no longer enrolled at the university.
- The project must develop an original concept. Follow-up developments of an original project already realised and distributed by the project owner are also eligible for support.
- The project must be innovative in terms of creativity and technology.

Additional conditions for a production grant and post-production grant

- The project must be submitted by a legal entity (single-member company, private limited company, joint stock company, cooperative, foundation, association, etc.).
- All copyrights and user rights must be in possession of the project owner.

Restrictions

Pro Helvetia provides no contributions towards the following:

- Infrastructure and equipment costs
- Commissioned work or projects in connection with an advertising campaign
- Pedagogic or therapeutic content
- Projects for promotional purposes
- Projects that degrade women, men or members of a specific community, or that generally denigrate human dignity
- Projects that glorify violence
- Projects of pornographic nature
- Purely technological, utilitarian projects with no recognisable content

Selection of projects

The allocation of grants is decided by a jury according to the criteria of conceptual originality, formal quality, feasibility and professionalism. The selection is based on the dossiers submitted by the applicants in each grant category.

Pro Helvetia reserves the right to allocate projects to a different grant category.

Contract

Following a favourable decision by the jury, Pro Helvetia concludes a written contract with the successful applicant defining a schedule for the principal stages of development and production, as well as the modalities of grant payment. The contract is negotiated individually with the applicant concerned based on the given project situation. The target is always the project's success and the acquisition of skills in line with the progression of the project.

Project submission

- The application deadline for all support measures is 1 September 2018 (included).
- No grants are awarded retroactively.
- Pro Helvetia accepts applications exclusively via myprohelvetia.ch.
- As a rule, all documentation must be submitted in English. If the applicant has no command of English, he/she must submit the documents in German, French or Italian and add a project summary with a maximum length of 1 DIN A4 page. The latter will be translated into English by Pro Helvetia for the benefit of the jury.
- Different projects can be submitted simultaneously for each of the grant categories.
- If a project is rejected, it may be re-submitted only once in the same category.
